Jen's Goals

Include more specific and student-centered goal-setting activities throughout the school year

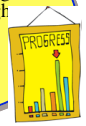
Have students understand importance of their effort in achieving their IEP benchmarks and goals

Review student IEP goals with students during pre-assessment process at very beginning of school year

Set up benchmarks towards meeting annual IEP goal for each student, so the goal does not seem overwhelming

Have students color bar graphs to show letter/sound identification, number identification, sight identification, words read per minute, math assessment scores, etc.

Have students self-monitor their achievement by having them track progress through bar graphs or behavioral contracts



Create student-centered behavioral contracts that correlate with IEP behavioral goals if applicable.

Provide consistent reinforcement both verbal (at all times) and tangible (when benchmarks are achieved)
